The talented and popular comedian, Thomas Q. Seabrooke, will present at the Academy on Wednesday and Thursday next for the first time in this city, an original comedy by George H. B. Witt streets, will be called up for trial in the Hustings Court, before Judge S. B. Witt either in his ruin or in that of the men with whose daughter the son of Fullerton is in love. The part gives Mr. Seabrooke ample oppor Nnity for the display of his exhilirating comedy talent, and also for some strong dramatic work, and telling some strong dramatic work, and telling touches of pathos. Both the play and the star have been enthusiastically received, and the press has been unanimous in its endorsement of the venture. A special matinee will be given on Thursday.

ADA REHAN. Orders and inquiries are already ar-riving at the box-office of the Academy of Music for the engagement of Ada Re-han and the Augustin Daly Comedy Company, which takes place here next Friday, March 27th. Ada Rehan's triumph as a star has been as complete as was her brilliant run as the leading lady of Daly's superb stock company. To-day Miss Rehan is the best representative on the American stage of theatrical art. Every attractive quality of her personality has with the skill of the artist, been italicized. in exactly the right manner, until she ranks in the list of actresses already immortalized, and among living women has a place in the affection of her generation rivalled only by Ellen Terry or Sarah Bernhardt. Miss Rehan enjoys the unique position of being as much loved in London-slow to accept American artists—as she is in this country. She did not leap into London's favor; she earned it. Lady Jeune, who is a personal friend of Ada Relian, recently wrote of her: "Every one remembers when she appeared here in 1888, the surprise, the genuine delight, the trepressible admiration and applause, which greeted the most brilliant and fascinating Katherine that this century has ever seen. * Never for one moment does Miss Rehan lose herself. Her strong personality, her high breeding, her perfect control, and her strong sense of fun go to form one of the most perfect representations possible." It is doubtful if any American actress for another generation will receive such a tribute as that from an English woman of position, and, yet it is but a just expression of London's feeling toward Miss. Rehan, whose name alone floated an American manager of a London theatre Daly's to fashlonable success and financial prosperity. Miss Rehan will be seen here in the Taming of the Shrew.
